Curley Recognized for Commitment to Advising Students

May 24, 2016

Academic advisors Christy Curley received a 2016 advising award from the National Academic Advising Association (NACADA).

Curley was awarded an Outstanding New Advisor Award – Primary Advising Role for her work with students through the College of Liberal Arts and Social Sciences Advisement Center. She has been with the Center for nearly three years and advises English, Philosophy and Writing and Linguistics majors.

One of her students shared, “Ms. Curley is dedicated and knowledgeable in what she does. No matter what time I send her a panic e-mail, worried about classes or my job or life in general, she responds by the following morning. Her advice is always spot-on and helpful. Whenever I have concerns about my degree, future job opportunities or simply registration, she is always helpful. Whether her help is references to her or other students’ experiences, links to websites that specifically spell out what I need to do, or just assurance that what is happening is correct, her help is always the right kind for the right situation. She knows what she’s doing, and she’s doing a fantastic job.”

About NACADA

NACADA promotes and supports quality academic advising in institutions of higher education to enhance the educational development of students. NACADA provides a forum for discussion, debate, and the exchange of ideas pertaining to academic advising through numerous activities and publications. NACADA also serves as an advocate for effective academic advising by providing a consulting and speaker service and funding for research related to academic advising.
